Course: Structure of Modern English
Course Codes: UAENG503A & UAENG603A.

Preamble:

The English language has evolved over the centuries, and when a student-learner of English literature studies courses that showcase the literatures of various regions of the world in the three years of their undergraduate course, it is imperative that they also learn the structure of this fascinating language as it has advanced to its present form.

The Structure of Modern English course has been designed to introduce students to the sound, structure, and meaning system of the English language. The course provides an orientation to both the theoretical and practical components in the study of the structure of language. The internal assessment component of this paper is flexible; it provides an opportunity to choose between two options to suit the capabilities of advanced and intermediate students alike. As a graded course, it is structured in a way that allows learners to progress from a basic comprehension of discrete elements of language such as sounds, syllables, words, phrases and clauses to an understanding of language at the level of discourse. It is comprehensive in that it pays adequate attention to the structure of language in its spoken and written form, and addresses both literary and non-literary discourse. Overall, the course is designed to enable students to understand the formal aspects of language, develop a vocabulary to discuss the structure of language, adopt a methodical and scientific approach to the study of language, and slowly but surely increase confidence in their ability to use and describe language in all its varied dimensions.

Objectives of the Course:

- 1) To enable students to understand Modern English in form, function, and meaning.
- 2) To familiarise students with basic concepts in the grammar and linguistics of Modern English.
- 3) To develop the ability to analyse the structure of Modern English in speech and writing.
- 4) To enable students to distinguish between a variety of registers and discuss the syntactic and stylistic characteristics of literary and non-literary discourse.

Outcome of the Course:

At the end of this course, students will

- 1) have developed a scientific approach to the study of Modern English.
- 2) have acquired adequate knowledge of the rules of grammar and linguistics.
- 3) be able to understand style and usage in a variety of registers.
- 4) be able to apply their knowledge of language to improve their proficiency in English.

Syllabus for TYBA Paper IX-A
Course: Elective Paper
Course Title: Literature and Science

Course Codes: UAENG506A & UAENG606A Preamble:

Literature and Science are two different aspects of the human mind and both the areas had always been perceived as two completely diverse fields of academic discourses which actually is far from being true. However, Literature and science go hand in hand if we look closely. Both emerged as a consequence of curiosity. Literature is born as a product of imagination and curiosity whereas science is 'born as a product of experimentation and curiosity. Although both are considered different, yet they're closely related. It is said that science or its requisite elements concern with the facts, reasons, causes and effects whereas literature also deals with the same but in modified forms and therefore the bond between literature and science is truly indissoluble and cannot be denied at all. We are living in the era where science and technology has become a matter of lived social reality, a matter of daily consumption. If literature is the mirror of society, then mirroring today's reality will definitely include an element of all pervasive science. Science has become the culture of twenty first century and science-fiction therefore, has become its folklore. Science-Fiction as a genre of literature mixes literary art, scientific and philosophical speculations while evoking a sense of wonder and thus functions as a fertile ground for interaction and integration of the two seemingly different academic discourses. This course, therefore, is designed in such a way that it provides an understanding of the complex relationship between Science and Literature and, in the process, improves the dialogue between literature and science. Introducing Science Fiction as a literary genre and its various components along with the recurring themes, ideas and issues commonly dealt with, the course intends to build a compact base for understanding the most popular genre of the twenty first century. Keeping in mind the vast diversity of the genre, the course makes an attempt to be inclusive while choosing the representative stories across the world. The immense popularity of the science fiction movies and texts is a testimony to this statement. Therefore, to keep up with the time, it is imperative to include this most popular genre into our academic syllabus.
